

Dear DEVILer,

I work for a high-tech company that uses a sophisticated robotic mail-delivery system. The robot makes mail stops by following a clear painted line on the hallway floor. Recently the line had to be recharged by applying special paint. While it was drying, signs were posted warning, "Please don't step on the invisible line."

I work at a bank and its hard to believe how many of our customers still don't know how to swipe their card through the ATM card reader. Because of this, my fellow tellers and I often find ourselves having to explain how it's done. One teller complained that she kept getting odd looks every time she explained it. I found out why when I overheard her tell one man, "Strip down facing me."

Dear DEVILer,

As kids, we used to work for an old farmer who everyone called 'Stumpy'. After school and on weekends we worked cutting asparagus. We once asked him why everyone called him 'Stumpy'. He took off a boot and exposed a toeless foot. Said, "Shark bit off me toes.. yes he did.... a Great White! Happened back in 1944 for sure." Of course we believed him because of all the Navy tattoos he displayed on both arms back and chest.

One day we came to work and he was not at the farm... We looked everywhere but failed to locate him... We did see his old 1950 Datsun truck down the road, the steering wheel was missing. Confused, we just left.

The following weekend we found him sitting on his porch in his rocking chair. He referred to it as his story telling chair and so we did too... Often, we would ask, "Stumpy.. Get in the story telling chair and tell us a story.

That day.... He began with; "Do you know why I wasn't here last Saturday?" Of course.... we didn't have a clue? "Well, my old Datsun broke down... Steering wheel cog rusted through... called the dealer and was told that I would have to wait six months for delivery of a cog. As you know I can't work without that old truck so I flew to Japan to get one.

Unfortunately, the Datsun factory would sell the cogs only in boxes of 1000. Well, as I told ya... I need that old truck so I bought the box of 1000.

On the flight home, somewhere over the western plains, the plane we were on ran into some trouble and we had to unload all unnecessary weight. I kept one cog for myself and let them throw the rest overboard.

As it would be... on the ground, two dirt farmers looked up and one said: "Look, Benny! It's raining Datsun cogs!"
