13 years ago, a Canadian woman was devastated when she lost her wedding ring while weeding her garden. But in 2015, the ring resurfaced—on a carrot. "The carrot had grown straight through the ring, enabling it to be plucked out after many years hiding in the soil."
 Even crazier? This has happened before. "In 2011, a Swedish woman found her wedding ring (on a carrot) 16 years after she lost it."

Hey DEVILer... Water fights were a big deal at one college dorm. And since every room had a sink, there was endless ammo.
 The biggest jokester was also our most common target returned to his room one day after class and noticed his door ajar. He looked up and saw a plastic bucket of water carefully balanced, ready to douse him. He carefully took it down and emptied it into his sink.
 Then he realized: we had also removed the drainpipe beneath his sink!

What weighs more.. A pound of gold or a pound of feathers?
 This is not a trick science trivia question.
 If you guessed that they weigh the same, you're wrong. A pound of feathers weighs more. Why? Gold is weighed in the troy measurement system. Therefore, when you convert them both to a uniform system, a pound of gold weighs approximately 373.24 grams and a pound of feathers approximately 453.59 grams.

Did you hear the story of the Italian woman from the Bronx, eight months pregnant, who goes into a six month coma. When she finally awakes in the hospital she is informed by the nurse that while she was in her coma she delivered twins, a girl and a boy. The babies are healthy and her brother, also from the Bronx, named them.
 "My brother is such an idiot, what could he have named them? What is my daughter's name?"
 When the nurse answered Denise the woman thought that is quite nice and perhaps her brother wasn't quite the idiot she feared. "And what is my son's name?", she inquired.
 The nurse answered "Denephew".
